

The Department of Political Science Disclaimer:

These are opportunities are not endorsed by the department. They are placed here as opportunities for students interested in political campaigns or organizations. Students need to do their own due diligence before volunteering.

Ben McAdams:

We are in the home stretch of our organizing operations, with the election just under two months away, and I wanted to provide some information to Political Science students at the U who might be interested in getting involved.

With just under two months until the election and one month until ballots go out, students can get great campaign organizing experience by volunteering with Ben McAdams' Campaign for Congress! We offer flexible volunteer opportunities throughout the week and training for phone-banking, text-banking, and other forms of outreach! All opportunities are virtual and/or socially distanced. For more information or to schedule a volunteer shift, contact abarnes@utdem.org or check out our website <https://www.mobilize.us/mcadamsforcongress/>.

Remote Organizing Internship

Who is Audrey Denney?

Audrey spent her childhood on her family's ranch in Central California where she gained a strong work ethic and respect for the land.

Audrey is running for Congress because the people of California's first district deserve a representative who works for the people here not for corporate interests and political gain.

Audrey supports:

- ★ Medicare for All
- ★ A Green New Deal
- ★ Campaign Finance Reform
- ★ Immigration Reform
- ★ A Women's Right to Choose

What is Remote Organizing?

With eleven counties in our district, thousands of volunteers in our database, and tens of thousands to call, we need YOU to help us organize! Over the next few months our Remote Organizing Internship program will teach you the following skills:

- Researching and building lists of influence-makers and change-makers
- Managing and controlling Zoom conference meetings, conference calls, and community chat spaces to achieve program goals
- Training others to amplify your work and developing key leadership skills
- Learning industry standard phone banking and text banking software
- Preparing scripts, meeting agendas, reports, and calendars
